INTERNATIONAL PROFESSIONALS TRAINING: YOUTH EXCHANGE FORMATS IN COOPERATION OF SCHOOLS AND YOUTH WORK

International exchanges at schools – often organized by individual committed teachers – can gain from the content-related and methodological support of extracurricular education providers. However, such cooperations must consider the school situation and seek a thematic link to the lessons. By anchoring a relevant topic in each case, a student encounter can be made more varied and be “learning in a different place”.

Topics from the areas of education for sustainable development and socio-ecological transformation are particularly suitable as the content of an international exchange, even outside foreign language lessons. “Limits to Growth” is therefore intended to serve as a means of getting to know formats and approaches in an international encounter.

In this seminar, specialists from both the school and extracurricular sectors will take part and share their experience. They will develop concrete recommendations on how to design an international exchange encounter as a result of school-extracurricular cooperation. Later they will apply these recommendations themselves and will be sensitized to understanding the other partners in a cooperation.
